I got my 11mm headlight repaired a week ago, great work. I changed it to a lower beam as it lights up a side road I drive at night about 200miles away. The old headlight was brighter than the new. I had the ability to upgrade the old one for $60, but since I just got it done I never got around to it. I also did not try it, but was going to go for the 10mm headlight. I'm driving a 1996 E36 325i. I got the new light professionally installed. (I do not know where you get your mechanic) I was going to do it myself, but cannot get the head unit off to take the oem light out. It is a pain in the ass. My mechanic has the tool to take it out, he has the tool to install it, but not the power to remove the head unit for my car. I have a repair slot (used to repair squeaks) in my trunk
