I have an external hard drive that I'd like to format for use on both Mac and Windows. I am using a 3GB Kingston DataTraveler USB 3.0 external hard drive for use on both Mac and Windows. I'd like to format it to be used on both Mac and Windows. Can someone please assist. Thanks. A: If you're not trying to use this drive with more than one operating system then the most straightforward solution is to simply do this in Disk Utility on each of the operating systems that you want to use it with. Assuming that you have access to both Mac and Windows on the same computer, then open Disk Utility in each operating system and select your external hard drive from the menu on the left hand side. Select the "Eject" option on the left, and then select either the "Mac" or "Windows" option to the right. From the next screen click "Eject" again. You're done. Of course, if you're trying to use it with more than one operating system then you need to do this for each operating system you want to use it with. A: When using Lion 1- Select your external drive. Select File System 2- Click select Disk utility 3- Click disk utility 4- Click the Erase disk button For Mountain Lion: 1- Select your external drive. Click File System 2- Click disk utility 3- Click the Erase disk button For Windows (7/8) 1- Right click on My Computer 2- Click Manage 3- Right click on Your USB drive. Click Uninstall 4- Click Unallocated space 5- Click change 6- Click Add For Windows (XP/Vista) 1- Right click on My Computer 2- Click Manage 3- Right click on your USB drive. Click Uninstall 4- Click uninstall 5- Click Format 6- Click Existing system 7- Click new Disk Utility for all operating systems Q: return an array within a function causes the entire array to lose its value I would like to return an array into another function, but I would like to be able to access it outside of the function. The problem I am running into is that the code within the function works as expected, but the returned value from the function returns as
